

Rand Looks Back 25 Years...

Mike: Structural and moral support

Celebrating a Quarter Century of Service!

Rand's original staff included just a few engineers, and everyone pitched in as needed, no matter what type of project. We prepared lots of building condition reports, so even though my training was in civil and structural engineering, I learned about heating, electrical, and plumbing systems. It was great practical experience.

Now Rand has teams of engineers and architects specializing in all types of building systems. And as we've branched out into a full-service design firm over the years, we've made our mark and earned our respect in the industry. I'm glad to have been part of that success from the beginning."
